From the Desk of Our Pastor ....

The Ultimate Command to Love

We have the great commandment this week of love for God and loving our neighbor as we love ourselves. Jesus tells us this is the summary of all the law and the prophets. But what does this love look like?

Jesus is always portrayed in the Gospels as being compassionate, especially to sinners who are struggling and know their needs. In our Exodus passage, we are struck by the command that Israel must treat the aliens and the poor among them well. If not, His wrath will flare up and He will kill them with the sword, and their women and children will become aliens and poor. In other words, love means to actually sacrifice our goods and agendas for others who are not convenient to us. To be selfless is to love our neighbors as ourselves. God loves this!

We often hear that people should be free to do whatever they want “as long as it doesn’t hurt others.” But selfish living by definition hurts others, keeping us from being what others need of us. God hates selfishness! Love by definition is self-sacrifice as Jesus demonstrates to the world. We see that St. Paul modeled this love to the Thessalonian church, and they, in turn, became imitators of him, and modeled Jesus to people all around them.

What is a stake here? Justice and wrath! It is our duty to love as Jesus does. Justice demands it. In fact, it is our duty to model the life of Christ to others so that they imitate us. This is God’s just requirement to love. If we do not, nothing can save us from the wrath to come. We must never presume on God’s mercy and compassion. Presumption is pride, and pride kills relationships, and kills love.

This warning should inspire the fear of God in us. However, we must see that God is really commanding us to be happy. God is very severe towards those who refuse to be happy. Since love is more than an emotion, but more essentially a work of faith and obedience, it can be commanded of us. God our Father knows we were made to love as He demonstrates to us through His Son Jesus and to do so brings us ultimate joy. Who has God placed in your life to love today? That person, however unlovable, needs your love today! Your joy and your salvation depends upon it.

Yours in Christ,

Father John Worgul
Pastor
