Prayer

I'm not sure if I ever met someone satisfied with their prayer life. When we consider what St. Paul says about praying without ceasing, most of us must honestly say that we could do a lot better. We would all be astonished if there was some "playback" of our thoughts on a recorder documenting our meandering thoughts throughout the day that have little or nothing to do with God. And when we do pray, at home or at Mass, it is hard to keep the interior quiet; chattering monkeys swing from limb to limb in the forests of our brains.

What do we do? It is essential that we understand, first and foremost, what prayer is. St. Augustine wrote a lengthy letter to a holy woman named Proba on prayer, and ultimately, he teaches that prayer is an orientation toward God driven by desire. Words are used sparingly; they are hooks, so to speak, to hang our thoughts on. Desire rides not only on words, but tears, and even on silence. Not too many of us will have a back-and-forth conversation like Abraham had with God in our Old Testament reading this week. But we do note that prayer is a two-way street; God's desire to communicate with us, and our desire to communicate with God.

The purpose of prayer is to achieve union with God, which is beyond words. The Lord's Prayer springs out to us from Jesus' own prayer life, adapted for us. As we look at each phrase, we see beneath them all a union of wills. Prayer is the fight to align our unruly wills with God. Prayer can be messy. When our wills are finally in union, the soul is said to be "recollected."

Prayer takes many forms. There are those so devoted to the rosary that they make others feel guilty for not praying it. They seem to forget that it was not prayed for during the first 1,500 years of Church history. Spending substantial time in Holy Scriptures is a form of prayer; it is driven by a deep desire to hear God in His Word. I have spoken before about the "Jesus Prayer." Sitting in silence before holy objects, preferably by candlelight, recollects the soul. So does walking out in nature, sitting by a babbling brook, and taking in the beauty of creation with a heart turned up to the Creator. For that matter, listening to music can be a form of prayer.

We see that the possibilities are endless; perhaps we do pray more than we think.

Yours in Christ,
Father John Worgul

Steward of the Month July 2025

Maria Edenbo

Maria has been a parishioner since 2021 having moved to the area from Laurel, MD. After experiencing the beautiful Carroll County sunrises, Maria was looking for a church through which she could offer God praise and thanksgiving. She is thrilled to have found SJCC. Maria is involved in several ministries; she has most likely greeted you on your way into Mass and enjoys being a Greeter for the simple pleasure of seeing the smiling faces of those coming to worship. Maria also participates in Catholic Daughters, and she is a Lector at Mass. She especially enjoys lecturing, stating that the preparation allows time for deeper reflection on the scripture readings during the week prior to Sunday Mass. Her ministry involvement is a source of encouragement and support in strengthening and growing her faith.

Thank you Maria,
for your willingness to steward your gifts
on behalf of God and Saint Joseph Catholic Church.
We are blessed to have you among us!

Facilities and Campus Safety

The Facilities Team at SJCC strives to make our campus as safe and clean as possible for our parishioners and visitors that number close to several thousand on a busy week.

We rely on you and our dedicated ushers to be our eyes and ears, especially on weekends when there is no facilities staff present, to report any immediate safety concerns including suspicious activities or unsafe condition as well as any accidents, illnesses or injuries to an usher so they can be of assistance to you if needed.

Non urgent and other repair requests related to our campus can be emailed to schwartzt@saintjoseph.cc
